COAL PRICES WILL STICK

No Reduction Likely in Washington This Winter.

Lower Rates of Transportation at Hagerstown Without Effect in This City.

The consumers of coal, who have been beging against hope for a decrease in the price of that article of domestic economy this winter, are downed to disappointment. Report has reached the city of a material decrease in coni transportation rates at Hagerstown, and a consequent lowering of the retail cost of the fuel in that vicinity It was hoped that the spirit of benefice manifested in the Cumberland valley would spread to this city, but an interview with several prominent coal dealers dispels that

The local retailers of coal are manimous in the opinion that the Hagerstown reduc-tion is a matter affecting only that locality, and cannot be considered as having a possi-ble effect upon the prices in this city.

It is conceded that a reduction is not an impossibility, owing to the fact that coal shippers have an eccentric habit of spring-ing a rise or reduction of coal prices unexpectedly upon an unsuspecting public, but so far as local dealers have been advised, no movement is stirring looking to a lowering

With reference to the matter, Mr. V. Baldwin Johnson, vice president of the local association of coal dealers, was seen by a Times reporter last night.

Most of the coal entering the city," said Mr. Johnson, "is handled by the Philadelptan and Reading Railroad Company nd connecting roads. The initiative in the matter of a reduction of the cost of Conl would naturally be taken by the railroad and the shippers would then take proportion are steps to meet the decrease by lowering the cost to retail dealers, who, in turn, would make a like out in favor of consumers.

"No innecations of a lowering of values have reached the city, and it is highly im-probable that a reduction will be made Of course every year, about the middle of March, the price of cost is lessened, owing to the near approach of sammer. The rates of transportation are not at the time perceptibly decreased, and it is owing to desire on the part of the roads for maintenance of the usual rates that leads color to the hellef that no reduction of cont will be made this winter."
